ABOUT IPEC

Given what the world is facing today, collaboration has become even more important, and there has never been a better time to unite as an industry.

The inaugural Integrated Project Engineering Congress (IPEC), developed in response to market demand, promises to be one of industry's most influential, transdisciplinary events, covering topics of Leadership and Management, whilst bringing together representatives from within the fields of Risk, Systems Engineering, Cost Engineering, Project Controls and Asset Management.

The congress will serve to enhance the delivery and ongoing utility of complex and critical capability for the benefit of consumers, the environment and the economy.

Leading speakers within their fields will cover themes such as:

- Capital Projects and Lifecycle;
- Sustainability and Resilience;
- Technology and Data;
- Human Systems and Culture; and
- Governance and Assurance

IPEC will deliver unique value by incorporating three conference opportunities into the one registration. Delegates will have access to the entire program and can select individual sessions and events from across conferences and themes.

The congress format will also reflect a new way in which we collaborate and learn. We've created an event with an innovative setup, giving you the opportunity to attend in person, virtually in real-time through our interactive platform, or later in replay. This allows for professionals around the world to get involved.

Companies and specialist providers from across government, academia and industry sectors and domains are invited to be associated with this international congress through sponsorship and participation support.

IPEC is proudly presented by Engineers Australia, Risk Engineering Society, Australian Cost Engineering Society, Systems Engineering Society of Australia, and the Asset Management Council, with the support of the College of Leadership and Management.

Don't miss the opportunity to join thought-provoking discussions, learn about industry trends, and develop career-enhancing connections at IPEC 2021.

WHY IPEC?

The Integrated Project Engineering Congress (IPEC) is an inaugural event, and will combine various conferences which were previously held independently: Risk Engineering & Project Controls Conference (RISK/PCC) and Systems Engineering Test and Evaluation Conference (SETE)

The conferences were integrated to fill the need to bring together representatives from production, science, technology sectors, business communities and government focusing on the effective and efficient delivery of engineering projects, and interested to deliver innovation and solutions in the fields of Risk, Systems and Cost Engineering and in projects and the management of assets. The congress will serve to enhance the delivery of engineering projects for the benefit of consumers, the environment and economy.

Historically, the Risk Conference has had 300 participants whilst SETE Conference has had 209 participants register and attend the conferences, which provides IPEC the opportunity to connect these networks to learn and share experiences collaboratively.

IPEC is the combination of 3 major conferences and various Technical Societies and Groups.

The Congress program will offer two full days of content featuring six streams, each developed with key topics which coincide with the congress theme "Creating the Future Together".

The Congress is a unique opportunity to take an integrated approach - attend in person or virtually providing a greater attendance and exposure for all participants whilst providing the opportunity to share knowledge, learn new practices and network with like minded professionals from different disciplines.
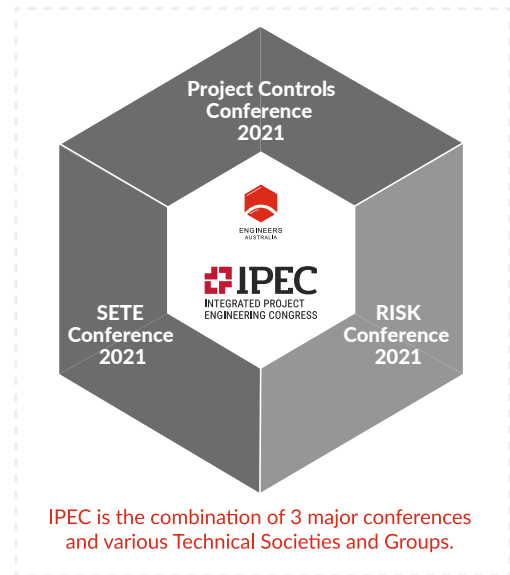

> Our hybrid model allowing participants to attend in person or virtually, will increase attendance and exposure. With recent restrictions, Engineers Australia has hosted all events via virtual platform and we have seen registrations increase by 58%, highlighting the need and opportunity to reach a wider audience.
